

MacNean House & Restaurant upholds much-coveted Seafood Circle membership

[18th March 2008] MacNean House & Restaurant owned by cookbook author and award-winning chef Neven Maguire, has retained its prestigious Seafood Circle membership awarded by Bord Iascaigh Mhara (BIM).

Glen Wheeler, who has previously worked in Gordon Ramsey's London restaurants, was trained by Neven Maguire and is now Head Chef at MacNean House & Restaurant says, "We are thrilled to be awarded Seafood Circle membership once again. We are passionate about fresh, seasonal seafood and the Seafood Circle plaque outside our door reassures new and existing customers that MacNean House & Restaurant only serves the best seafood."

The BIM Seafood Circle recognises and awards hospitality and retail businesses that consistently deliver the highest standards of seafood and service. During February and March 2008, 132 Irish restaurants, pubs and seafood retailers will be awarded BIM Seafood Circle Membership.

ENDS